

Requesting support from your employer

An online MBA from EGADE Business School will equip you with the skill set that can help enhance performance metrics at work and promote innovation within your company. As a result, your employer may be interested in helping you further your education and willing to provide the support you need.

The different ways your employer can support you

Many companies within Latin America have agreements with universities where they provide financial assistance for students. For information on creating an agreement between your organization and EGADE Business School, contact Perla Tirado, our corporate relationship manager, at perla.tirado@tec.mx

In addition to funding, employers can also add flexibility to your schedule while you complete your degree or help you identify opportunities to apply your new skills on the job. Scheduling a conversation with your human resources (HR) representative is a great way to start exploring your options.

How to approach the support conversation

Before you contact your HR department, make sure you do your research. Find out if your company has an educational benefits program or has sponsored individuals in the past — and familiarize yourself with these efforts. You should also know as much about our program as possible so you can answer any questions that may arise. Review information about our program at negociosenlinea.egade.tec.mx/en/mba.

We urge you to begin this process as early as possible to ensure you're prepared once classes begin.

Schedule an appointment

Plan a meeting with your supervisor or HR representative. You should be prepared to discuss the program, identify the reasons why you want to earn this degree and how your newfound skill set can benefit the company in the short and long term.

Develop a pitch

Make a list of the reasons why earning your degree will make you more valuable to your organization. Think about issues your department or company is facing or new initiatives they're working on and explain how the skill set you'll gain will help you alleviate these issues or enhance the initiatives. Be sure your objectives and reasoning are clear and that you are prepared to discuss specifics.

Ensure all questions are answered

Let your employer know that they can speak with an EGADE Business School representative if they have any questions about the program or about the application process.

Return on investment for your company

When pitching EGADe MBAOnline to your supervisor, consider program benefits such as:

The flexibility: Through our online learning environment, you'll be able to complete your degree as you work and apply your new skills to your job in real time. We also offer two completion tracks to accommodate your work schedule: five terms in as few as 15 months or eight terms in as few as 24 months.

Your new network: EGADe Business School attracts some of the top minds from around the world — professionals who can serve as future employees, clients or mentors for your organization and help it continue to grow.

Our forward-thinking curriculum: Rooted in progressive values, our MBA will equip you with a variety of skills that you can invest back into your organization—and pass on to your colleagues. Courses like “Innovation and Entrepreneurship” will prepare you to drive innovation on a large scale while our immersions will teach you to conduct business across cultures and borders. Additionally, through our digital transformation concentration, you will develop the technical skills that are crucial in today's business world.

As always, your admissions counselor is available to answer questions or provide further guidance at any time. Don't hesitate to reach out at: +52 55 5351 2587 or admissions@negociosenlinea.egade.tec.mx
